With their yellow and blue hard hats on and shovels in hand, students at Stratford School in Milpitas helped local officials break ground at the new Legoland Discovery Center inside Great Mall. The 31,000-square-foot building is the first of its kind in California.

The students didn't dig up any dirt — but they did shuffle through a large pile of Legos dumped by a bulldozer.

The center is more of an indoor playground that will have 10 build and play areas where kids can build with the approximate 1-2 millions Legos, check out the interactive rides and take part in classes taught by a Lego master model builder.

The facility also will have a Miniland area, where people can see iconic structures build with Legos. In addition, rooms will be available for visitors to host birthdays and other events.

Legoland Discovery Center is scheduled to open in the spring.
